

Maximising population health and prevention in healthcare curricula

Toolkit launch events

Do you work for an education provider and do you design healthcare courses?

NHS England would like to invite you to the launch of their toolkit which has been developed to support education providers to enhance population health and prevention in the design of healthcare courses. The long-term ambition being to embed capability within the workforce to improve the health of the population and reduce inequalities.

Hear from experts in health and education including Prof Sheona MacLeod (Director of Education and Training, NHS England) as well as a host of representatives leading the way in this work, who will share best practice and